BANK MELODIES.

(Air—"John Anderson my Jo-John.")

Nick Biddle, O! my auld Nick,
When we were first acquaint,
The Bank had full five years to run,
The fees were freely lent;
But now the Bank is winding up,
The cash don't come so thick;
But blessings on your silver pow,
Nick Biddle, my auld Nick.

Nick Biddle, O, my auld Nick,
We've had our fun together,
Money and canty days, Nick,
We've spent w' ane anither:
Now we maun totter down, Nick,
But hand in hand we'll stick,
And growl together at the foot,
Nick Biddle, oh, my Nick.

The Moth and the King.—A young king, about to take possession of his throne, while musing one night in his study, beheld a pretty moth flying round one of the lights.

"Silly fly," he said, "ba'ck, ba'ck—it dazbles but to burn!" and he put it away gently with his hand. Again and again it flew around the flame, and each time nearer and nearer.

"Idle fool," he exclaimed again, brushing it away—"wilt thou be deceived by this fatal glare?" Fly from the brilliant woe to the stars of heaven, which thou canst never touch, or by the simple flowers of the field—they will burn thee not.

Still the perverse insect rushed upon its fate till its powdered wings were consumed, and it lay fluttering and dying on the table.

"Senseless dunce," said the prince, "thou deservest thy destiny—die the victim of blindness and infatuation; thou mightest have lived and been happy."

Years went by—the young prince grew to a stately monarch—but the lives of kings are seldom peaceful, and long before the curls which fell from his ample brow were touched by the snows of time, he stood at the block to yield his head to the fierce rage of an indignant and merciless people. He remembered the incident of past years, for his heart misgave him then that it might be an omen.

"And is it even thus, then," he said—"have all the splendors of royalty, all the pride of humanity, all the labor of science left me but on a level with the despised moth? Nay, a more rational end was his. It was but a puff of the blaze and he was free—but I have fluttered around the deadly flame of ambition and died by inches."—N. Y. Mirror.

Extract of a letter from Paris.

"I had the pleasure of lately assisting at a sacred banquet, where, among the guests, were to be found the elite and the illustrious of most nations. Many of your readers will recollect the delightful, and I may add, intellectual Diners mensuels de la Revue Encyclopedique, which more than twelve years ago were attended by the most distinguished characters of all nations, who then visited, or dwelt, in this classic capital. The father and founder of those interesting and splendid entertainments, was the celebrated Julien of Paris, venerable patriot, poet, and philosopher, who lately visited England in the interests of practical humanity, and whose time-honored name was honorably recorded in the pages of the Court Journal. These dinners have been revived, under the auspices of the 'Universal Statistical Society,' whose President, Cesar Moreau, is always ready to promote useful information, that tends to make man kind and sociable to man, and who has done more than any other Frenchman I know of, towards making the French and British respect and esteem each other. These meetings are now called the 'Union of Nations'; politics are excluded, and they are confined, literally, to the feast of reason and the flow of soul." On Tuesday last, about 150 members dined in the splendid saloon of the Place de Chatelet. Julien de Paris presided, having upon his right General Lafayette, and on his left the gallant Admiral, Sir Sidney Smith. Amongst several other persons of the highest respectability and talent, I have only space to cite the Prince Plater, Generals Devreux and Dubourg, Cesar Moreau, M. Livingston, the Envoy of the United States, Mr. Gase, the Chevalier G. Bennis, the celebrated African traveller, Dr. Rifaud, Mr. J. W. Lake, Mr. Ditchfield, Sir Charles Anster, and several other British residents and visitors. The principal speakers were the Chairman, Gen. Lafayette, Prince Plater, the American Envoy, and Cesar Moreau, whose complimentary speech to the learned and literati of England, was acknowledged by Mr. J. W. Lake, who dilated on the advantages of the 'Union of Nations,' especially of the first two nations in the universe, and whose sentiments were received with the warmest expression of feeling towards England and Englishmen. Mr. Bennis's services in promoting the universal interests of literature, were highly applauded, and acknowledged by him in a short emphatic speech. All the orations were in the French language. The learned Professor, O'Sullivan, of the Academy of Belles Lettres, Sciences, &c. spoke ably and fluently, and at half past eleven the company retired." F.

The following excellent satire upon the marvellous and horrible, has been received and published by most of our brethren of the quill and scissors, as sober truth:—

Suicide.—Mr. Daniel Davis of Putney, Vt., committed suicide on the night of the 17th ult. The manner of committing the deed is, one would think, the most horrid self torture that could be inflicted. He escaped from his house some time in the night, procured a hammer, went to his barn, ascended one of the high beams, and in the first place endeavored to dig out one of his eyes with a penknife. But not succeeding, he struck the blade of the knife to the hilt several times into one of his thighs, in order, as is supposed, to cut the large artery there situated. But failing, he leaned over the beam, as appearances show, with his head downward, and with the claws of the hammer aforesaid, he beat his head until he smashed the skull completely in, to the size of one's hand; hooking out with the claws of the hammer, pieces of the skull and some parts of the brain. And what is quite astonishing, after all this, he attempted to descend the ladder, as prints of a bloody hand were seen thereon; but his strength probably failed, and it is supposed he fell to the floor, as his ribs were broken. He was found the next morning by his family, apparently lifeless. But moving him, in some measure, restored animation; and he, it is said, made the following exclamation—"My God! my God; why hast thou forsaken me!" He lingered until Friday perfectly rational, when he expired. He manifested much sorrow for what he had done—said he was tempted—and in an evil hour he yielded—he could not help doing it. He had been partially deranged for several months previous to his committing the horrid deed.

"More ways than one to choke a Cat."—

The Lowell Journal contains the following:—

"We have heard of a ludicrous mode of getting out of this vale of tears, adopted, not long since, by a man in Bellicera alms-house. The unfortunate fellow had a wooden leg, and being unable to march well in this world, he unshipped his leg, and by the help thereof, managed to march out of it. His soul was 'above all low delay,' and could not rest contented upon the narrow sole to which his removable member was tapered; and after taking a comfortable position on the flat of his back, he crammed the small end of his leg down his throat, in consequence of which, his soul not liking the rivalry of such a co-tenant of the body, took flight, and left the immortal part of man as inanimate as the wooden substitute. There he lay in the morning, with the butt of his leg raised high in air, and the straps flying out like triumphal banners."

FOR SALE IN CHARLESTOWN.—The following parcels of Real Estate, all situated within twenty minutes walk of State Street:—

DOMESTIC INSTRUMENT.—The habit of using an instrument of this kind, which is portable and convenient, and which is capable of performing, even with this repeated stimulus, their proper functions with the degree of energy requisite to support the body in health. The great utility of Lavements or Domestic Clysters, the use of which has long been established in the opinions of the medical profession in this country, as generally to form part of the directions of our most eminent practitioners to their dyspeptic or bilious patients. Hitherto one of the greatest obstacles to the general adoption of Domestic Injections has been the inconvenient construction and unwieldy size of the instruments employed for this purpose. This instrument may be used by an invalid without assistance, and is so portable as to admit of being carried in the coat pocket without inconvenience. The flexible tube, commonly employed for apparatus of this kind, from its want of durability, having proved a source of great inconvenience, particularly to persons residing in the country, a new kind of tubing is manufactured under the protection of a patent, which is essentially different from that of any other person, and is equally durable and perfect in all climates. For sale by the quantity, or at retail, at 45 Milk street, opposite Federal street. apl 2

FRIDAY, APRIL 11, 1834.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE MORNING POST.—
Sir—The Chairman and Secretaries of the Anti-Bank Meeting, which was convened at Faneuil Hall on the 14th ultimo, have read with equal surprise and regret, the following Preamble and Resolutions, adopted by the Bank meeting, at the same place, on Wednesday last:—

"It having been proclaimed on the floor of the Senate of the United States, by the Senator from Missouri, when he presented to that body the resolutions adopted by the late Administration meeting in this city, that the President and Secretaries of that meeting had assured him that the meeting consisted of seven thousand persons; and such an assurance carrying with it the impression that all present were favorable to the objects of that meeting;

Therefore, Resolved, That the merchants, mechanics, manufacturers, and laborers of Boston, here assembled, do unhesitatingly and unqualifiedly pronounce the said statement of the officers of that meeting, to be a DELIBERATE AND WILFUL MISREPRESENTATION OF THE WELL-KNOWN SENTIMENTS OF BOSTONIANS, as the ballot box will most fully show whenever an opportunity shall occur to bring public opinion to the test."

The officers of the Anti-Bank Meeting have made no statements, publicly or privately, in relation to that subject, which are not correct, and none as to the number of the persons present, which have not been admitted to be so, even by Journals in favor of the U. S. Bank. They have stated, and they still believe, that about five thousand persons were within the walls of Faneuil Hall, and about two thousand without, on that occasion.

That all the persons present were in favor of the resolutions adopted, could never have been supposed, or asserted, by the officers of a meeting, from which several hundred rioters among that number, were, from necessity indignantly expelled.

The above quoted preamble states, that the assurance as to the numbers present "carries with it the impression that all present were favorable to the objects of the meeting." Are those who voted in favor of that preamble willing that a similar rule of construction should be applied to their own statements of the numbers attending their own meetings?—The number of persons at a public meeting is matter of opinion that may be fairly stated: that of those supporting the proceedings is a matter of inference, to be deduced from the generality of the applause, and the show of hands. In this respect, the Bank meeting on Wednesday last, was unquestionably inferior to the far greater, and more enthusiastic anti-Bank meeting which preceded it—more enthusiasm, and greater apparent unanimity never having before been exhibited, it is thought, within that Hall.

The inference which seems to have been drawn from the largeness of the meeting, by the eloquent and patriotic Senator, who submitted the anti-Bank Resolutions to the U. S. Senate, cannot be matter of just censure for those who admit, as the preamble does admit, that an assurance as to the numbers attending the meeting "carries with it the impression that all present were favorable to the objects of the meeting." But the officers of that meeting made no such assertion.

The object of the above preamble and resolution appears to be, to draw an inference as to the perfect unanimity of the anti-Bank meeting, and then to fasten that inference, as the statement of a positive fact, upon the officers of the meeting, for the purpose of charging them with "DELIBERATE AND WILFUL MISREPRESENTATION." And this accusation is hazarded without knowledge of the testimony which is thus stigmatized as false.

The "WILFUL MISREPRESENTATION" involved in such a proceeding, requires no comment to enable an intelligent public to arrive at a just conclusion on this subject.

WM. FOSTER,

Chairman of the Meeting.

SAM'L DEXTER,
CHARLES DOUGLAS,
WM. W. ANDREWS,
CHARLES EWER,

Secretaries.

Editors who have published the preamble and resolutions above quoted, are respectfully requested to insert this reply.

Irish Patriotism.—The following opinion of Mr. Trenor relative to Dr. Macneven's apostasy, shows how little he will be likely to influence the Irish. Mr. Trenor is one of the worthiest, as he was one of the most efficient, of the Irish Patriots. He was treasurer of the United Irishmen, in which holy cause he embarked with the zeal of a martyr, and in it he sacrificed his fortune, nearly half a million of dollars, and many years of his life. He was one of the directors sentenced to death, but escaped the night before the execution was to have taken place. He afterwards surrendered under the King's proclamation of amnesty. But he experienced British faith, was a long while imprisoned, two months in solitary confinement, and the only person he saw during that time, was a deaf and dumb man who brought him his food. He was refused passports to this country by Rufus King, the Minister of John Adams at London. Mr. Trenor has seen too much and suffered too much, from the British, to aid the British party in this country:—

Monday, 7th April, 1834.

To the Editor of the Evening Post.—

Gentlemen—I was sitting with my respected friend, Thomas Trenor, of Grove street, yesterday afternoon, when a carriage drove to the door, out of which descended five gentlemen, one of whom handed a letter to Mr. Trenor. This letter was from Dr. Macneven, saying that he and his friends wished Mr. Trenor to preside as chairman at a meeting to be held on Monday evening. Mr. Trenor promptly replied, "Gentlemen, I shall have nothing to do with Dr. Macneven or his meeting. I have been his fellow prisoner in the dungeons of the British Inquisition, where I spent four years of the prime of life. I have been his attached and firm friend for thirty-seven years. Would to God that I had followed him to the grave whilst the halo was round his head. You might as well attempt to tear up by the roots that tree before my door, as induce me to take a single step in favor of Dr. Macneven, or his new found doctrine." I am respectfully, yours, &c.

The Bank papers use their utmost endeavors to keep up the panic, and increase in desperation in proportion as business of all kinds resumes its wonted prosperity. But they have had their day; and as the public see through the chicanery, so will its effects decrease.

NEW YORK ELECTION.

The New York Standard of Wednesday

says—

"The number of votes polled yesterday in the different wards of this city, is unparalleled in the annals of our elections. Upwards of twenty thousand three hundred votes were deposited yesterday in the ballot boxes. The returns from the different wards, with the estimated majorities, are such as to inspire the democracy with renewed confidence, and to throw a panic over the panic party, such as will dishearten them in the two last days of the contest. Every ward in the city has done its duty manfully and well."

The truth out.—The panickites, in their Faneuil Hall report, speaking of the pecuniary distress which has pervaded the mercantile classes, says—

"It may be some consolation for these sufferings if their effect shall be to awaken the nation to a sense of the usurpation and encroachments upon the Constitution, which may be perpetrated under a popular name."

The plain English of this is, we do not value our losses and pecuniary sufferings, if we can but overthrow this cursed democracy. Every intelligent man in the country knows this to be the feelings of the Bank party, and their object from the beginning of their work of ruin. But they have sacrificed to the golden calf, and they will not have the consolation for which they so ardently hope.

The political principles of the Bank party of Boston, are so identified with the political character of those who opposed the last war, that their support is a blight and a leprosy to any cause. We have little commiseration for the sufferings of those who sought to be martyrs, in hopes to gain a crown of immortal political glory—but we do lament that their fanatical and incendiary zeal should have injured so many innocent men.

If the young men had accepted our suggestions in regard to a parade on Wednesday, they would undoubtedly have succeeded in attracting to their ranks a sufficient number of boys to have filled Faneuil Hall, and saved them the mortification of a decided failure. But they were too headstrong to take advice, and in their vain-glory, neglected effectually to instruct the precious youths that composed the assembly, when and how to applaud. The consequence was that the two boys in the front gallery, who did all the enacting for that section of the house, made frequent mistakes—sometimes neglecting entirely the hinting pauses and touching emphasis of the gentleman who read the report, and at others, interrupting the eloquence of his most effective passages, with the clapping of their hands.

Although our former suggestions have not received the attention they deserved from the "young uns," we are induced to give them one more piece of advice. A protracted meeting is the only thing that will do the business. For the first few days no spectators should be admitted; during this time the scholars should be under the instruction of suitable masters. When the exhibition day arrives they will then be able to obey him understandingly, when he gives the appropriate order of "groan, sinners, groan."

The Mercantile Journal, Transcript, and several other papers pay a merited tribute of praise to Capt. HOWARD, of the Revenue Cutter Hamilton, for his active services in rendering all necessary assistance to vessels in our harbor. If a vessel is in distress he is indefatigable in furnishing assistance, and has thus far proved successful in his efforts—having several times of late, afforded very valuable aid in preserving the property of our merchants.

The ship Pagoda, and cargo, abandoned at sea on the 12th of March, was insured at the following offices:—Suffolk, $30,000; Columbian, 30,000; Commercial, 20,000; Mercantile Marine, 15,500; Merchants, 11,000;—Washington, 700; Neptune, 300; Hope, 250. Total, 117,850.

Tremont Theatre.—The Kembles make their last appearance in Boston, this evening, in the Merchant of Venice, and The Taming of the Shrew. Mr. Kemble's Shylock is said to be one of his best characters. The entertainments are for Mr. K's benefit. A brilliant and crowded house may be expected.

A choice of one half of the boxes for this evening, will be sold at auction, this morning, at 10 o'clock, in the lower Saloon of the Theatre.

The editor of the Lowell Journal thinks nothing but a special interposition of Providence, can save the country from a revolution. Don't be frightened, friend, you shan't be hurt.

"The Ruined Deacon" is an interesting tale, written by a lady of this city. The style of the story is easy and graceful, and evinces much taste and judgment.

The Italian Opera Company commence their performances at Philadelphia, on Tuesday next, with "Lili Arabi."

Jackson's Administration—Treaty with Spain.—What honest merchant, what patriotic citizen, what sincere lover of his country, can withhold his support from the administration, when he hears that the last of our various claims upon foreign powers, is now, definitely, and gloriously settled? We are authorized to state, upon unquestionable authority, that the son of the Hon. Cornelius P. Van Ness, our minister to Spain, is on his way to this country with despatches, announcing the completion of a treaty with Spain, which secures to the merchants of our country—aye, to the merchants, millions of dollars. This is the last of several claims, to an immense amount, which the people of this country have had upon foreign powers, for spoiliations upon our commerce, and which hung lazily, and slothfully attended to, during the administration of J. Q. Adams, and which now, by the spirit and energy of our present executive, have been brought to a successful acknowledgement and redemption. Merchants, have you no gratitude? Citizens, will you not do to, and support him who has made honorable abroad, and revenge your insulted commerce?—N. Y. Standard.

POLICE COURT.

[Thursday.]

Commonwealth vs. John Henry Conway, and John P. Rice, for an assault on Nelson M. Merriman.—There existed a very general expectation, that some singular sub rosa transactions would be developed in the process of the examination of this case, and a vast concourse of genteel spectators convened in the Court house....to be most emphatically disappointed.

On Tuesday evening Mr Conway entered Mr Merriman's store, and Mr Rice followed him in soon after. Mr Conway asked Mr Merriman if he had received a note from him. Mr M. answered in the affirmative. Mr Conway then asked him if he intended to answer it. To this question, Merriman replied that he had taken legal advice upon the note, and had decided not to answer it. Conway then suddenly commenced striking Merriman about the head, ears and face with the butt end of common cowhide, which he had concealed under his cloak or sleeve. The first blow nearly stunned Merriman, who broke a yard-stick in attempting to defend himself; his face and head were severely bruised. A witness testified that the blows fell so fast that he could not count them—he thought there were fifty blows struck. This witness and Mr Merriman were engaged in a game of backgammon when Mr Conway entered. After the fight was over, Conway told Merriman he was ready to meet him with pistols, and afford him ample satisfaction. Mr Conway admitted to the full extent the alleged attack on the complainant, and attempted to show that he had received great provocation, by asking first, if he (Merriman) "had not at different times advanced money to Mrs Conway, without his knowledge and consent?" This question being ruled out by the Court, Mr Conway declined putting any further interrogatories, although he had prepared a number in writing. The Court informed him that the law would afford him full redress for any injury he had received from Merriman, although it would not justify him in committing an assault on him, unless the provocation was extreme and given immediately previous to it. Mr C. acquiesced in the decision of the Court, and remarked that he desired nothing but what was honorable and lawful, and that if the defence which he intended to offer could not be properly admitted in the Police Court, he was willing to await the action of a higher tribunal.

With respect to Mr Rice, the evidence was simply, that he prevented the individual who was in the store with Mr Merriman, from interfering between the combatants, and said to him—"This matter will be judicially investigated, and it is not worth while for you to interfere." The witness also thought he heard Rice say to Conway, "Jump over the counter." Mr R. was in court, as a spectator, when the complaint was read, and expressed great surprise at his unexpected arraignment. He, however, defended himself with spirit, alleging that he thought it was his duty to prevent the witness from interfering between Merriman and his friend. He displayed both the suafter in modo, et fortiter in re, in his deportment, and though, in the eye of the law, technically guilty of the offence alleged, we believe he was heartily acquitted by all present. They were both required to give bonds for their appearance at the Municipal Court, in May, in the sum of $100, each, which were obtained on the spot.

* Neither the contents, nor the subject, of the "note" referred to were disclosed in the examination.

Female litigants.—Mrs Sally Fagan complained against Mrs Mary Howard, for an assault. The first witness examined was the son of the injured party, who swore that Mrs Howard seized his mother by the throat, and pitched her into the gutter, without any provocation, the defendant being armed at the said time with a brandy bottle. Mrs Howard replied to his testimony, by reminding him of "the day of judgment"—and was of opinion he would look better lying in his coffin, than standing up taking a false oath before God and gentlemen.

Mrs Fagan came to the support of her son, and, untying her calash, and unhooking her cloak, said, "here are the scars."

As the Judge, himself, could not perceive the wounds complained of, he appointed one of the constables, celebrated for his courtesy and wit, to examine the wounded premises; he inspected her neck carefully, and reported that the wounds should be returned under the head of "missing." Mrs Howard followed the constable's report, by addressing Mrs Fagan very affectionately—"My dear woman, you know I think too much of my character to dirty my fingers by touching you with them. I have sued you for defamation of my character, and you have patched up this story to be even with me."

Constable.—When I went to arrest her, two or three in the Fagan part of the house, were down upon Mrs. Howard, like mad cats, because she had sued them; and the neighbors thought, if one was arrested the whole ought to be.

Court.—I think the defendant's story is entitled to as much confidence as the complainant's oath. The boy is evidently under his mother's control, and no reliance can be placed in him. If she thinks she has been injured she can bring a civil action, for damages, by which means the cup of her wrath will be filled. Let the defendant be discharged.

Dead Boly.—This morning the dead body of a man was discovered, from the steamboat McDonough, lying at Foster's wharf, afloat in the channel. The body was much decayed and disfigured, and supposed to have laid in the water some months. From a memorandum book found in his pocket, he is supposed to have been a mate of a vessel—a jury of inquest was called by Coroner Snow, who returned a verdict, "Drowned in Boston harbor, whether by accident or otherwise not known."—Transcript.

Connecticut Election.—The Hartford Times of Tuesday, says—

"The Election has terminated, and the result, although not yet ascertained, is very probably against us. Our returns are yet imperfect; but from those that have come it is doubtful whether there is an election of Governor or Lieut. Governor by the people. Mr Foot is ahead."

The Richmond (Va.) Compiler says they had been informed by a passenger in the Northern Stage, that the cart in which the mail is carried was thrown down a precipice near Hanover Court House, a few nights previously. One of the horses had fallen across the driver, who was found dead, and the other horse had got upon his feet and in endeavoring to free himself from the harness, trampled the driver upon the face and head until he was a heap of gore.

Mr A. Merritt, of Baltimore, when out on Monday last with a party of gentlemen, on a fox chase, in Quaker Neck, Md. was thrown from his horse and killed. As he had the lead in the chase, he was unfortunately not discovered for some time after; had it been otherwise, his life might probably have been saved.

A Lucky Fellow.—A Mr Weeks, of Exeter, New Hampshire, gives notice that he has received through the medium of the Post Office, a ten dollar bill, endorsed as "a present," from an unknown person. It may be presumed the "removal of the deposits" has not distressed the donor.

The Elizabethtown (Ky.) Sentinel says in regard to the supposed cases of cholera:—"We are gratified to state that this fearful disease has, so far as we can learn, been staid in our county. Those who were attacked, mentioned in our last, have recovered and no new cases occurred."

The sum of £125,000 has been awarded to Admiral Napier's fleet as prize money, for the capture of the Miguelite fleet; which money is to be paid in three instalments, at intervals of six months.

The Rail Road from Columbia to Lancaster has been opened, and the locomotive is now in full and successful operation. The engine for the inclined plane is hourly expected, and the 16th inst. is appointed for the opening of the whole distance between Columbia and Philadelphia.

Gen. Chambers, of the U. S. Senate, is detained at home by indisposition.

BENTON'S SPEECH.—TEN THOUSAND COPIES of Mr Benton's Speech in opposition to the Bill introduced by Mr Webster for prolonging the Charter of the U. S. Bank, are now for sale at this office at $2.50 per hundred. Orders from the country prompt attended to.
